

FCC Commissioners
The Federal Communications Commission RE: Docket 04-435
445 12th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear FCC Commissioners ,

I have many concerns about the FCC's proposal to relax the restrictions on the use of cell phones on airplanes in flight.

In everyday public use, persons with cell phones are extremely rude and inconsiderate of others around them. The person talking is usually loud, and conversations often include personal information or opinions which are offensive to others. The speaker's attention is divided causing a lack of responsibility on the speaker's part. Accidents happen. Children run amuck as their parents or guardians talk. The use of cell phones in the cramped quarters of a plane invades what little individual space a traveller has, and would only invite the ire of those around the cell phone user. The introduction of cell phone use in the cabin will not only increase tension among passengers, it will compromise flight attendants' ability to maintain order in an emergency.

There is no hard evidence that cell phone use doesn't interfere with navigational instruments. Cell phone use could also enable terrorists to coordinate a plan of action more effectively.

Please leave the current rules in effect.
